Green Campus/ Plastic Free Campus

Our ancient texts say that “Yat Pinde Tat Brahmande” which simply means “as is the macrocosm so is the microcosm”. In scientific terms, when we translate this, it leads us to understand that we are made up of the same five elements that the universe is made up of i.e., earth, water, fire, air and space. When we look at it in a very broad perspective, protecting the environment is just protecting our extended existence and caring for the environment is only caring for oneself. Any imbalance in nature created by us, eventually comes back to haunt us in some way or the other, and therefore environment protection as a value is one of the most important ones to be inculcated in young people.

In our college with its great spread of greenery and its large variety of birds, butterflies etc., we get an opportunity to inculcate this value among our young people and to make them realize the significance of preserving and enriching the environment - to make them aware about the blessings of nature that they have in abundance. When in several parts of the world there is scarcity for land, extreme soil pollution, lack of tree cover, poor quality of air and scarcity of water, the bounty of the college is a reminder to be grateful.

Policy thrust areas

- Students are encouraged to take an active interest in protecting and preserving the college's unique Ramsar site. Understanding the interdependence between the environment and human activity is essential for nurturing a sustainable future.
- The college maintains a herbal garden for students to explore and learn about plants, trees, birds, and butterflies. In an era where we are looking for alternatives for health and healing, knowledge about uses of medicinal herbs, their upkeep and maintenance is of utmost importance. Students are hereby expected to appreciate Indian knowledge systems and heritage.
